Prescribing Education: How Evidence-Based e-Learning Can Complement Clinical Care for Patients, Family/Friend Care Partners, and Health Care Providers

Dr. Anthony J. Levinson, MD, FRCPC, MSc, MA
Director, Division of e-Learning Innovation
John R. Evans Chair in Health Sciences Educational Research and Instructional Development
Professor, Department of Psychiatry and Behavioural Neurosciences
Faculty of Health Sciences, McMaster University

In this webinar, Dr. Levinson will provide an overview of e-learning resources for the public, family/friend care partners, and health care providers related to older adult cognitive and mental health. A guided tour will include an overview of evidence-based instructional design for e-learning, case-based scenarios for how you might use these resources in your practice, as well as recent research about the impact of the DementiaRisk.ca and iGeriCare.ca platforms. Online courses for physicians as well as unregulated care providers who work in long-term care and other settings will also be presented.

Friday, January 19, 2023
8 a.m. to 9 a.m. Eastern Standard Time (Toronto)

Educational Objectives

1. Describe key features of evidence-informed instructional design for e-learning
2. Use educational prescriptions to adopt a 'blended' teaching approach, building on current patient education strategies
3. Integrate specific online resources into practice to complement patient- and family-centred care best practice guidelines
